City of Greenacres Named One of the Nation's 100 Best Communities for Young People by America's Promise Alliance and ING

Annual Competition Recognizes Communities that Prioritize Youth Education and Well-Being

September 12, 2012—Greenacres today was named one of America's Promise Alliance's 100 Best Communities for Young People presented by ING. The national award was given to Greenacres to recognize its outstanding and innovative work in addressing the high school dropout crisis and for its programs and services that make it an outstanding place for youth to live, learn and grow.

Greenacres was honored as a 100 Best winner for a fifth time for its continued commitment to youth and a dedication to preserving their health and safety. In an effort to curtail child care costs and ensure youth have a safe place outside of school, Family Central, Inc. provides afterschool care reimbursements to working families and many area youth participate in the community's Afterschool Program which are all located in a drug-free recreational zone. Similarly, Hot Spot, the high school program, provides safe, structured weekend activities including recreation, college tours, community service and mentoring opportunities for teens. Safety is further reinforced through the anti-bullying training curriculum, Turning Bullies into Buddies, offered to youth program participants through the Literacy Coalition of Palm Beach County.

To promote healthy lifestyles, Greenacres partnered with Florida Atlantic University, the Cooperative Extension and the West Palm Beach Elks Club to provide young people with nutrition education and gardening experiences to encourage wholesome food choices. To ensure that all youth are eating balanced meals, the Summer Food program offers free meals to youth and teens up to age 18.

“Being named one of America's Promise Alliance's 100 Best is significant and meaningful to the entire community,” said the Honorable Samuel J. Ferreri, Mayor for the City of Greenacres. “So many dedicated people and programs contributed to this win and it further reinforces our belief that a focus on youth pays dividends to the entire community.”

“As young people across the country go back to school, it is especially timely to recognize communities like Greenacres that have come together to make supporting young people a top priority and that are committed to helping young Americans reach their full potential,” said John Gomperts, America’s Promise Alliance president and CEO. “The 100 Best winners are doing outstanding work delivering the Five Promises that create the conditions for all young people to have the best chance for success. We hope the example set by these communities provides inspiration for others to take action.”

At noon EST on Sept. 12, Gomperts will join America’s Promise Alliance Chair Alma Powell and ING Foundation President Rhonda Mims at the Newseum in Washington, D.C., to officially announce the 100 winning communities during a live webcast.

“The increase we have seen in graduation rates over the past few years is due, in large part, to the hard work communities such as Greenacres have done to make sure their youth have access to an outstanding education and support services,” said Rhonda Mims, president of the ING Foundation and head of the ING U.S. Office of Corporate Responsibility. “It is also important for ING to partner with organizations such as America’s Promise Alliance so we can share these best practices and play a role in improving student achievement and the nation’s economy.”

Greenacres will receive a $2,500 grant, signage identifying the community as one of the nation’s 100 Best Communities for Young People, and access to America’s Promise Alliance’s community development resources.

The 100 Best competition is part of the Grad Nation campaign, a large and growing movement of dedicated individuals, organizations and communities working together to end the dropout crisis. The goal of Grad Nation is to raise the national high school graduation rate to 90 percent by 2020, with no school graduating fewer than 80 percent of its students on time.

All communities entering the 100 Best competition completed a rigorous application where they provided details on how their existing programs and initiatives help deliver the Five Promises—resources identified by America’s Promise as being critical to the development of healthy, successful children: caring adults; safe places; a healthy start; effective education; and opportunities to help others. Applicants also were asked to describe how different sectors of their community work together to help children and families overcome challenges. Most importantly, communities were judged on the strength and innovation of their efforts and programs to help young people graduate from high school prepared for college and the 21st century workforce.

In its sixth year, the competition experienced its greatest interest to date with nominations from more than 320 communities representing all 50 states, Washington, D.C., the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico. Winners were chosen by a distinguished panel of judges that included 2012 National Teacher of the Year Rebecca Mielowocki, 2012 National Superintendent of the Year Heath Morrison, National Urban League President Marc Morial, and GLSEN Executive Director Eliza Byard.

Two youth representatives also were named as selection panelists. These include Austin Bargmann, 15, from Brighton, Colo., a two-time 100 Best winner, and Ashley Levanduski, 17, from Paso Robles, Calif., who serves as a volunteer coach with an America's Promise partner organization, The First Tee, an international youth organization that introduces golf and its inherent values to young people.
